Men and Things in Italy.

After five years' travel and residence in Italia thought, the other day, I had found a new the in Italian character-viz., a case of jolly drunks ness in one of the nation, in a public conveyant I was on my way to Leghorn from Florence, in cars, when there entered an individual, singing White and grey Merino high voice, talking thick Italian, and making self most amusingly familiar in the funniest White and grey Merino drunken moods, with the company at large. he proved to be a Scotchman; so my opinion of universal sobriety and civility of traveling Italia still remains unchanged.

Few of my stay-at-home countrymen can la any correct idea of the vexations attending los motion in Italy. I will give them an instance. T distance between Florence and Naples via Rome about the same as between Boston and Philade phia via New York. In the latter case, you has but to think of your carpet-bag ten minutes before you start, and in about twenty hours, and at a expense of say ten dollars, you go from the P grim City to the Quaker metropolis without as ing leave of any one but your-wife, if you har that blessing. Now look at the Italian side of the picture. I had a sudden call to go to Naples. takes one day to get the necessary permission from the police. To reach Naples by land occupies for days, requires twenty-two visés, or examination of your passport, not less than seven of your valis and an expenditure of fees, etc., of in all eigh dollars, which, added to the road expenses, make a total of forty dollars-i. e., time in traveling England and America, over a given distance, is: five to one, and expense, four to one. No one wh has not undergone the purgatory of police-bureau in the road and custom-house officials, can ha any conception of the annoyance and delay the occasion. Brigandage, in the individual line, h mostly died out in Italy; but it has been reorga ized by the governments, who, through their en ployés, seek to attain the maximum of extortion in one form and another, from travelers without absolutely interdicting all international intercours But our own countrymen's hands are not clean this particular. Formerly, the American Mini ter at Rome appointed an Englishman to act United States Consul at Civita Vecchia, a port which the American mercantile flag is never d played. This gentleman's business was confine solely to levying a tax of one dollar a head on ever American who passed through this place on his wa to or from Rome. Mr. Marcy very properly an end to this imposition; but this winter it been reorganized, and a Mr. Mortimer, claiming be the Consul of the United States, by the conn vance of the police, extorts a dollar from each his compatriots for the privilege of going on fleas, and some half dozen domestics at each int to satisfy, each and all combining with the land lords to lie to you in every way and bleed you t the uttermost-I have paid thirty cents for the privilege of washing my hands and face previous to sitting down to a breakfast charged as a fi dinner-and you may form some slight conception of the shade-side of journeying on classical soil How great, therefore, must be its attractions when in one moment of its clear sunshine, its not scenery, or its artistic and historical associations all these annoyances disappear from the mind leaving it joyous and exhilarated, and eager to en counter fresh perils of the road-side at the chanof being similarly recompensed. It has always surprised me that the dinner sy tem of the French steamers on the Mediterranes has not been introduced on our Atlantic boats. the English and American steamboats the profit sion of meats, pastries, vegetables, etc., on the gledy-piggledy on, the passengers left to carve for themselues, roasts, boils, fries, stews, bakes, and broils, all in one confused mass; no system amon the waiters, no napkins, no elbow-room; in short the tout ensemble of an Atlantic steamer's dinner table is about as unrefined and piggish a spectaas well can be conceived of civilized beings. A this is avoided in Continental boats, simply serving one course at a time, carved away from the table, and passed to each of the passengers in tund Fewer waiters suffice to do the work; there abundance of room on the table, which, spread with fruit or flowers, looks cheerful and appetitish; meats are served hot; there is no victimizing of few passengers as carvers for the rest, losing the dinners in consequence; each article is proper served to all; time given for mastication and con versation; in short, under this system we eat list Christians, and under the other, like beasts. Prof. Messrs. Editors, as you are always ready to Liverpool lines to secure a competent Mediterran Price in gilt frames, $10,00 each, in the sheet un- an steward for one of their boats and give the sp tem a trial. My word for it, ladies and gentlem would thank them, while they would economize food and service; for the present system is wastell in the extreme, besides being disgusting - [O] Harper's Weekly.
